I had a life experience when I was 18 years old that I never forgot. I began a relationship with God and as I learned about the nature of God, His forgiveness, mercy and love for people I learned that asking forgiveness is easy, the hard part is changing one's actions and behavior, this is what ultimately is very important. It was made clear to me that I needed to write down everyone over the last 5 years, age 18, that I offended and mistreated. I knew I had to personally visit these people and share with them what I had done and why I was talking with them in face to face. It took me two weeks to seek out all the people I needed to ask to forgive me. This experience at 18 taught me as a young man that my actions have consequences.

I share this with you because saying you're sorry after trust has been broken is easy. Actions and positive steps that show one's contrite heart and that you have truly humbled yourself and repented (turned from bad behavior) of wrong doing must take place.

Positive steps that reinstate trust over-time is mandatory to build trust again. What are those steps that you Ash can take at this pivotal time in Waszupp's history. After all, you are solely responsible for the pain and suffering brought upon many who trusted you! I am not willing to overlook this wrong without positive steps in the right direction from you. Ash are you aware that crowdfunder's believe that you purposefully defrauded them? Are you aware that thousands have left WCF. Are you aware that some are contemplating reporting this to the FBI? Are you aware that many want to sue you? Are you aware that you put Ricky and Fred in a dangerous liable position? Are you aware?

Ash, your actions have hurt, damaged and caused great sorrow and pain to thousands. You not only must verbally apologize to all, you have to take ACTION and steps that show how sorry you truly are. Talk is easy, talk is cheap but actions are a different story and have tremendous meaning.

I want to trust you again, the field wants to trust you again, therefore I have outlined some real steps you can take to rebuild that trust.

Come to a call and apologize and ahead of that call people should be getting paid and a flurry of positive activity must occur ahead of your apology tour.

Also, a structure to run the company in anyone's absence MUST be put in place. Refund all monies to anyone who requests it. People you promised to pay should be paid immediately. Be a man of action. Do this and you'll get my vote of confidence and I'm sure the trust of thousands will returned to you!

Action must follow the spoken words... I'm sorry!

Thank you for listening.

Stephan
